My sister just sent me this message:

Last spring my daughter and her friend created a very short film about a pair of saltines being attacked by our dog. Yesterday we figured out how to post it on YouTube for the whole world to see. We have yet to figure out why that's a good idea, but oh well. The film is called "saltine attack", and I have no clue how to tell you to search for it, because we are blocked from searching in YouTube at work. We coded it as "Comedy" and the keywords we put in are "saltine" and "dog". I will warn you that yesterday when we uploaded it there were 206 other videos about saltines. Who knows what the total is today. I had no idea it was such a popular genre, since it has been such a long time since I was in film school.
