

Via /. this Marketing Blog posting from Douglas Karr on the Presidential candidates (declared and not) and what their websites are running on.

So that got me wondering—what are the other candidates'™ sites running? Does this provide some insight into their overall candidacy?

Is the next President of the United States running Linux? | The Marketing Technology Blog

Interesting is the balance between the parties. While the whole field is pretty much evenly split between Windows (43%) and Linux/FreeBSD (57%) the split by party is Republicans, Windows (69%) to Linux (31%); Dems Windows (10%) to Linux/FreeBSD (90%). The lone Dem using Windows is, predictably, Hillary Clinton.