 We already made reference to the fact that we are squatting right across the street from the headquarters of Saatchi & Saatchi, a worldwide advertising concern. Next door to us, to the east, is an architectural firm, whose various models fill their windows (see photos). Last night, on the way home from St. Martin's, we noticed the name of the firm for the first time, it is none other than ARUP, one of the top design/build architectural engineering firms in the world. There was a fantastic profile of one of ARUP head engineers in the New Yorker a year or so back. They have been responsible for such projects as the Bird's Nest stadium for the Beijing Olympics.
