

In which Pawn travels by car, coach and plane; finds himself alighting outside Amsterdam and then train to Den Haag.
From the air, the North Sea has long chains of oil tankers all lined up:

Tankers lined up in North

A wind farm and drilling platform oddly juxtaposed:

Windfarm and drilling platform in North Sea

Also all lined up are the tulips:

Tulip fields

Here's a snap from the train ride down to The Hague:

A train of clouds viewed from the train

A graffito's take on the Seven Deadly Sins

A lovely selection of Art Nouveau buildings clustered around Gravenstraat (the first photo from my lunch seat on the plaza):

Some interesting graffiti along Spui:

271

061
12

Lastly, a sign marking Maison de Bonneterie, which sadly closed just a couple of years ago, having been one of the poshest shops in town:

LEVERANCIER
VAN HET KONINKRIJK

MAISON
DE
BONNETERIE

AMSTERDAM
DEN HAAG

Bonneterie is the lovely Art Nouveau building shown above.
Okay, back to life. Tomorrow the conference starts...